The prize-firing returns of the British navy, recently issued, are said to show that the best work was done by one of the battleships on the China station. The worst firing is set down to the discredit of ships in the Channel Squadron, which is charged with the protection of a region where inaccurate gunnery in time of war would prove costly. In modern warfare hearts of oak are not enough. Straight shooting also is necessary.

Kansas City justice has punished viclous stupidity which gave "cat calls" in a theater and otherwise disturbed the peace and infringed upon the pleasure of patrons of an entertainment. It were well that similar justice should vertake the class of disturbers who ought to be called en core fiends, but are, in fact, generally hired by the entertainers or are too devoted friends of individuals on a program. When on the first spontaneous outburst of applause it is apparent that, however meritorious, the mass of the audience does not want any more of that kind there ought to be discipline for the encore fiends. There ought also to be consideration for the fatigue of performers. The force of public opinion, if not of the law, should be firmly exerted on the encore flends.

In the death of Charles Dudley Warner there passed a figure that towered in the realm of literature. Mr. Warner died sudenly of heart disease at Hartford, Conn., at the age of 71. His death leaves Mark Twain the only survivor of the famous trio that made Hartford itself famous, and he leaves, in his works a legacy from which future generations of Americans will profit. Not the least of his achievements was his description of Adirondack life, under the title of "In the Wilderness," which was realistic enough to induce the New York Legislature to pass a rigorous law for the protection of deer. Personally Mr. Warner was one of the gentlest and kindliest of men, beloved by all who knew him to the day of his death. It is a brave epitaph.
